

Court of Wolves by Robyn Young

5 Stars

The second book of the New World Rising Trilogy

From the first book, Sons of the Blood, Henry Tudor defeated Richard III and clinched the most important document – the secret map. Lorenzo de Medici fought against the Popes, who plotted to kill him. The Spanish monarchs, Ferdinand and Isabella, crusaded against the Islamic Moors to drive them from All Spain.

James (also known as Jack) Wynter suffered from PTSD, because his father, Sir Thomas Vaughan, was executed by Richard III. His mother was burnt to death inside the house under the order from Pope Sixtus. Jack saw what happened to the princes in the tower. His father's map was stolen by his horrible half-brother, Harry Vaughan. After being outlawed by Henry VII, Jack moved to the Florentine Republic and met Lorenzo the Magnificent who determined his future.

Henry VII sent Harry Vaughan to Spain on the covert operation – to poach Columbus from Isabella II.

A very stunning novel with espionages in England, Italy and Spain based on the historical event! Robyn Young is on par with Bernard Cornwell!
