

Trading Down by Stephen Norman

5 stars

A brilliant thriller from the financial world!

Chris and Dom worked together in Hong Kong before they moved to London. Chris married Olivia whom he met at Dom's party. They tried to have a baby without success. Chris is responsible for all the IT security operations at his bank. Failure of the system is not an option. He, his bosses and staff investigate the source of the financial meltdowns which were caused by terrorists.

The terrorists first attacked the bank branch in Dubai. Jafar Hashemi was kidnapped and his family's bank account was frozen. The reasons given were because the Iranian family were subjected to the US sanctions against Iran politically.

I got it nearly right as I identified the correct culprit who caused the computing systems to crash while reading three-quarters of the book long before Chris caught someone. I could be the financial sleuth!

I thank Stephen Norman for writing this excellent thriller!
