

Trust No One By Anthony Mosawi.

2 Stars.

A disappointing read.

I was excited when I started to read 'Trust No One' as I thought the title was promising, however, unfortunately, I found it was a disappointing read.

The heroine is Sara who has no idea who her mother is. She is found in a sensory deprivation tank with very few possessions, including a photo of a man with the caption "Don't trust this man." Sara is desperate to find out the truth about her ancestry.

Sara discovers that many factions are chasing after her, including GCHQ and other government spies. Unfortunately, the plot and characters lack cohesion not only for me but also for several other reviewers.

Even though jumping into different time zones can add to the enjoyment of many novels, I felt that in 'Trust No One' it only added to the overall confusion. I was determined to finish the book, but I'm sorry this wasn't the spy thriller for me, but I'm sure it will appeal to others.

Galadriel.

Breakaway Reviewers received a copy of this book to review